Reid and his wife Jewell first visited Islesboro in summer 1980, rented a home during the summer of 1981, and then purchased property and built a home on Islesboro in 1982. They have been involved in numerous island and Tarratine Club activities during many summers, winter and fall getaways, and Christmas holidays since. Their sons (David, Clay and Andrew) worked various jobs in island businesses during student-year summer breaks, and participated in many Club and island activities, including especially youth and adult soft ball. They bring their families to visit each summer.

He has many years of experience owning and managing small businesses including 14 years running a retail/wholesale book business and three years managing production and retail activities in a full-service photo shop.

Since 1990 Reid has been the sole proprietor of an educational consulting and all-subjects tutoring practice which he established, developed and managed. He focused on services for learning variational students with individual needs and a specialty focus on preparation for standardized admissions testing.

Reid can provide guidance in areas such as creation of wholesale business; purchasing, sales, accounts receivable/payable; product promotion; customer base development; personnel management; customer relations and business/financial planning.
